CONTENTS

1. Making Introductions
2. Greeting People
3. Talking about Family

1: Making Introductions

Introduction

Knowing how to introduce yourself politely to strangers is an important social skill, which you will need to use over and over again in your personal, social and professional life. Since there are many different ways of introducing oneself and others, an effective introduction requires you to have clear understanding of the situation, place and your own status vis-à-vis the person you want to approach.

Activity 1

Discuss the following questions with your class:

- Have you ever spoken to a stranger in a public place? Why?
- Has a stranger ever approached you on the road? How did you react?

Introducing Yourself

When you introduce yourself, your sentences should be in the following orders: signal, introduction and additional information and closure. For example: Hi (signal). I'm Nidhi Sharma (Introduction). I Work with Sarla Dixit (additional Information). It's been a pleasure speaking to you (closure).

Introductions can be roughly divided into two forms: formal and informal.

Formal: May I introduce myself? My name is Shyam Sundar, I work for Infosys.

Informal: Hello, I'm Renuka Shah. I'm Heera Mahajan's friend

If you have heard about the person or know him but have never met him before, this is the way to go about your introduction: Hello. You must be at Khera. My name is Sunil Sharma. Your friend Rajdeep speaks highly of you.

Exercise 1

Mark whether the following introductions are formal or informal.

- I don't think we have met. My name is Anil Kumar. I take care of sales in Maruti.
Formal/Informal: _____
- Hello there! I've seen you before. I'm Nisha. I think we met at Rashi's party.
Formal/Informal: _____
- Excuse me. Aren't you Robin Sharma? I'm Preeti Singh. I enjoy reading your books.
Formal/Informal: _____
- Mr Lall, allow me to introduce Sonia from the accounts department.
Formal/Informal: _____
- Ladies and gentlemen, I now introduce to you, the singing sensation of our times, Ms Rohini hinde! Formal/Informal: _____

Introducing Yourself to Many

Sometimes you are required to introduce yourself when addressing a gathering before giving a speech or making a presentation.

Begin by saying:

- Hello. First of all, let me introduce myself. I'm...
- For those of you who don't know me, I'm...

While introducing yourself before a gathering, be very careful about your body language. Stand or sit comfortably but do not slouch. If you are nervous, try to hide it. Give a confident and pleasant smile while speaking, and make sure you are audible. Make eye contact with at least a few people, if not everyone.

Activity 2

Each student introduces himself to his partner and the partner responds to the introduction.

Activity 3

Introduce yourself in front of your class. Ask your teacher to give you feedback on how you can improve your introduction.

Introductions at the Office

Let's talk about introductions in the professional space. How you introduce yourself to your superiors should be different from how you introduce yourself to your peers or juniors. When approaching a senior, always introduce yourself first. Also, find out whether according to your office culture, should you be on first name basis with others or should you use titles such as Mr Khanna. If You're sitting, make sure you stand before introducing yourself.

Introducing yourself to your peers or juniors will be similar, though you can be a little more relaxed or informal. On most occasions, Your Juniors should introduce themselves to you first and not the other way round.

Introducing Others

When introducing others, look and talk to one person first and then dedicate your attention to the second person. In formal situations, it is always the younger person who is presented to the older, man to the woman and the junior to the senior.

For the purpose of explanation, look at this situation: You, Raj Choudhary and Aman Raut meet at an office party. You have to introduce Raj and Aman to each other. Aman is a senior and Raj is a junior. Since it's a formal situation, you have to first present the junior, in this case Raj Choudhary, to the senior, in this case Aman Raut.

First, you will give information about Raj, this is Aman Raut. He's a good friend of mine. There are no such rules for informal introductions.

Exercise 2

Read the following introductions and answer the questions.

- a. Rohit, May I introduce someone to you? This is Sareen Khurana.
Sareen, this is Rohit Malhotra. He's a colleague of mine.
Is it a formal or an informal introduction? _____
Can you tell who the senior here is? _____
- b. Manav, I'd like you to meet someone . This is Razwan.
Rizwan, this is Manav. He's good friend of mine.
Is it a formal or an informal introduction? _____
Can you tell who the senior here is? _____
- c. Shammi, this is Raja.
Raja, this is Shammi.
Is it a formal or an informal introduction? _____
Can you tell who the senior here is? _____
- d. Shruti, Nisha.
Nisha, Shruti.
Is it a formal or an informal introduction? _____
Can you tell who the senior here is? _____

Responding to introductions

When someone is introduced to you, you must greet them. There are no rules as to which party should use which greeting. Both the parties can use the same greeting if they want.

Greeting

I am pleased to meet you

It is nice to meet you.

Glad to meet you. (Informal)

Good to meet you (Informal)

Response to a greeting

Pleased to meet you too.

Nice to meet you too.

Glad to meet you too.

Same here. /Likewise

“How are you?” as greeting should only be used with people you know and not with someone who you are meeting for the first time.

“How do you do?” is a greeting which is not much used these days. However if it is used, the response to it would be to repeat “How do you do?” When you say “How do you do” you pronounce it “Howjyado” without pausing between words.

Activity 4

Divide into small groups of three. Now each one takes turns to introduce the other

Activity 5

Simulate the following situations. You may need one or two partners.

- It's your first day in college. You are introducing yourself to your fellow student.
- You are attending a walk-in-interview and you have to introduce yourself.
- You are talking your friend home for the first time and you have to introduce her/him to your mother.
- You are meeting an eminent person you admire in a meeting. You have to introduce yourself to him.
- Your parents come to college to meet your teacher. You have to introduce them to your teacher.
- You have to introduce yourself to a gathering that has come to listen to your talk.
- You have to informally introduce two of your friends to each other.
- Your father introduces you to his boss. You have to greet him.
- Your friend introduces you to one of his friends. You have to greet him.

2: Greeting People

Introduction

Anywhere you go – whether it is in school, college, your workplace or to a social gathering, greeting others is an everyday occurrence but at the same time, an important social tool which affects the way you further interact with the others.

Activity 1

What are the different ways in which you interact with each other? Discuss with your class.

Greeting Others

When someone introduces you to someone else, you must use a greeting to show that you are pleased to meet him. You will use either a formal or an informal greeting according to the situation. Some general or formal examples of greeting are:

It's nice to meet you.

It's a pleasure to meet you.

I am pleased to meet you.

Some informal examples of greeting are:

Hi!

Hi there!

Glad to meet you.

When you greet people you know very well, you can be informal with them. It would look awkward if you are too formal with them. You can even add a few questions to add to the friendliness. Here are a few examples:

How are You ?

How's it going? / How're you doing?

How's life?

What's up?

What's New?

Exercise 1

List the different situations which you will use formal or informal greetings.

Formal Situations	Informal Situations

Responding to a Friendly Question

How do you respond if someone asks a friendly question? You should answer the question and then you respond with another friendly question. This is how you will keep a conversation going.

Here are a few Examples:

A: How are You?

B: Very well thank you. And how about you?

A: How are You?

B: Fine, thank you. And You?

A: How are you?

B: Great! And how about you?

Exercise 2

Discuss with your partner and select the appropriate greeting for each occasion / situation from the box.

Merry Christmas!	Well done! Congratulations!	Bon Voyage!
Wish you all the best!	Welcome to our team!	I'm sorry. My condolences.
Never mind! Better luck next time.

Occasion/Situation	Greeting/Message
On your friend's success
Farewell to a friend
On the death of someone
Your friend has lost a game

On a new player's entry into your team
Your Christian friend on Christmas

Greeting in Different Cultures

The most common way of greeting others is by shaking hands. However, different countries and cultures all over the world have their own ways of greeting others. In India, for example, one common form of greeting is to fold our hands into a Namaste. Cheek kissing is an accepted form of greeting in social gatherings in many western countries. In East Asian countries, bowing before others is common.

If you are travelling to a different country, it is best to do a bit of research beforehand on the greeting etiquette of the country. However, even if you do not know about the greeting customs of a place, you can usually manage to get by if you have pleasant and welcoming body language.

Body Language

While greeting others, it is important to be aware of your own body language, as well as others'. If the other person is showing disinterest or discomfort through their body language (if, for example, they are constantly checking their watch or looking over their shoulders), then the polite thing is to move away and end the conversation.

Make sure that your own body language is open, friendly and non-threatening. Be careful to maintain a proper distance from the other person – do not stand too close or too far. Smile often and look into the other person's eyes. When you shake hands, use a firm but not crushing grip.

Telephone Greetings

While talking on the telephone casually, we usually begin with a simple "hello?" However, while handling official calls at the workplace, you need to be more careful. A pleasant phone greeting creates the mood for the conversation, as the listener often responds in a similar mood. If we sound rude or depressed on the phone, chances are the caller too will respond negatively.

While greeting on the phone, be natural and pleasant. Make sure that your voice sounds upbeat and enthusiastic.

Keep official greetings brief and to-the-point. Excessively long greeting can be a waste of time and therefore, might irritate the caller.

Don't try to follow a script for official conversations. Focus being helpful and responding to the requirements of the situation. There are no stock phrases which can help you carry out a successful phone conversation.

Activity 2

With a partner, act out a telephone conversation between an angry customer and a pleasant and helpful customer care executive. Change roles and act it out again.

Activity 3

Simulate the following situations. You may need more than one partner for a few situations.

- Your friend introduces you to his other friend. Greet him informally.
- Your friend introduces you to his father. Greet him in a formal way.
- Your friend didn't do well in an interview and has failed to secure a job.
- Your friend has lost his father.
- Your friend visits your workplace for the first time.
- Your neighbor is blessed with a baby.
- You have come to visit your sick friend in the hospital. You have to greet her.
- You have come to visit your sick friend in the hospital and you are about to take leave.
- It's New Year and you have to greet your friend.
- You are meeting your friend after a very long time.

3: Talking about Family

Introduction

Do you agree that?

- Family is the most important social unit?
- Having a family is an important human need?
- It is good to live in a big family with one's grandparents, uncles, aunts and cousins?
- People who live alone or away from families are essentially unhappy people?

Now, read these news items and revisit the questions.

Working Woman Face More Instances of Domestic Violence

A new study on domestic violence has shown shocking results: working women face almost double the amount of domestic violence than women who don't work.

Almost everyone who feels concern about the condition of women in our country and is working for the promotion of women's rights will agree that one way for women to battle their cultural subjugation is for them to become financially secure and independent by earning their own money. The image of the Indian working woman-smart, successful and independent- has been promoted through countless media, including television commercials and films.

However, this image of the assertive working woman tells only half the truth. When researchers decided to dig deeper into the reason for increased domestic violence against working women, the picture that emerged was ugly, but not unfamiliar. "When a woman starts her own income, her position in the family is definitely empowered. However, this empowerment is not accepted by many within the family," a leading social worker recently said, adding, “Those who wish to see women fulfilling only the traditionally acceptable roles of the wife, the mother and the homemaker do not find it easy to accept her as a wage-earner, capable of making independent decisions on family economics. This, then, leads to differences within the family- between the women and her husband or her in-laws-which, in turn, leads to her persecution-physical and mental-by the family.”

Cases of domestic violence against women are much higher among couples when the husband is unemployed or has recently lost his job. The Indian understanding of family systems is often rigid, with men playing the role of the “bread-earners” while the women are the “care-givers”. Any overturning of this traditional setup can lead to social disapproval and frustration on the man’s part, which he vents through violence.

The findings of study show how far Indian society is from accepting new kinds of roles for women within new and different family systems.

Adapted from an article in The Hindu titled “Working Face More Domestic Violence in India Study”

Domestic Violence Causes More Death than Terror Activities

Do you agree that India would have been a “peaceful” nation if only we had not been plagued by internal and external terror activities? Well, those who agree need to take a close look at behavior of husbands in our nation’s smallest and most “secure” unit – the family.

A new survey by the United Nations shows that the number of dowry- death was four times the number of deaths caused by terror activities in 2009. In fact, domestic violence has grown – in numbers as well as the level of cruelty-alarmingly in the last five years, and is the major contributor to domestic crime.

The report also stated that more and more women are now coming out to formally report instances of domestic violence, but the increase in FIRs is not proportional to the increase in violence. The greater number of cases of in-house terror is because of dowry related problems, which shows that even today, marriage is seen as a get-rich-quick mechanism by many, who resort to violence when the women and her family fail to deliver according to their wishes. This, in spite of the Domestic Violence Law of 2005 which is considered by many to be a turning point in laws for protection of women.

Adapted from an article in the Hindustan Times titled “Domestic Violence Kills more in India than Terror Strikes.”

Activity 1

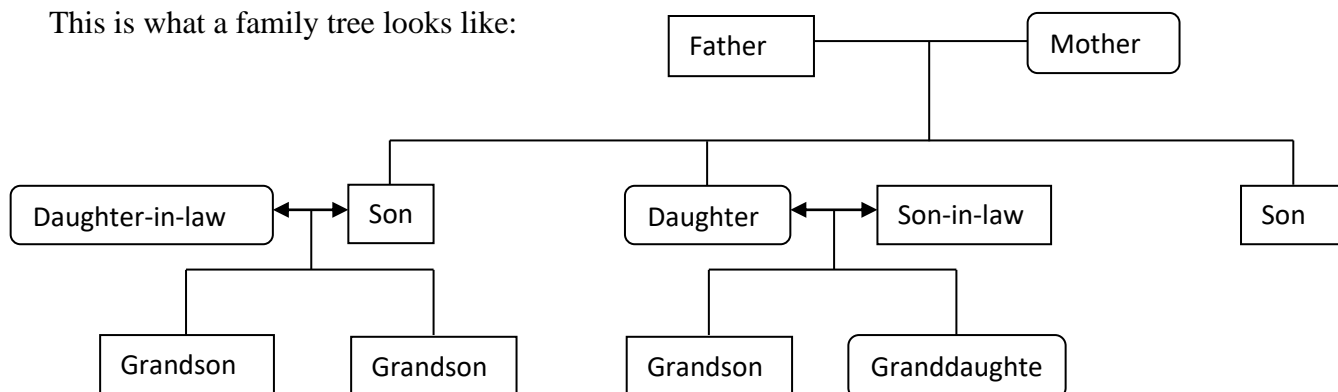

Discusses with your class.

- What is a family?
- Would you consider your pets your family too? Why/Why not?
- Why is having a family important?

A Family Tree

A Family tree tells us how each one in the family is related to others in the family and even their ancestors.

This is what a family tree looks like:

Exercise 1

Draw your own family tree. But, use proper nouns instead of common nouns. In other words use your own name instead of “Son” or “Daughter”, After you do so, explain to your class how each member is related to the other.

Use colored lines and shapes to describe the relationship of the family members with one another. For example, the different sons are also each other’s brothers; the mother and father are also grandparents, and so on. How many different relationships do you see emerging from the tree?

Now, write how old each one in the tree is. In your class, take turns to speak about the family starting with the oldest couple. Use short and simple sentences.

Naming the Family

Here are some commonly used English words used to describe relationships: father, mother, brother, sister, nephew, niece, cousin, uncle, aunt, grandfather, grandmother, paternal grandfather, maternal grandmother, stepfather etc,

In the context of family relationships the word “cousin” refers to the child (male or female) of your uncle or aunt. The usage “cousin sister” or “cousin brother” is incorrect.

Your “great-grandmother” is your grandmother or grandfather’s mother. Similarly, your “great-grandfather” is your grandfather or grandmother’s father.

The phrase ‘in-law’ is added to the relationship if it is a relationship by marriage. Therefore, your husband’s sister is your “sister-in-law”.

Exercise 2

Look up the dictionary for the meanings of the following pairs of words:

- elder/older
- smaller/younger
- window/widower

Exercise 3

Go back to your family tree and talk about your favorite family member to your partner. Give reasons for choosing them as your favorite, for example: I like my father best because he takes care of me, or, I like my mother best because she is a good friend.

Exercise 4

The initiative includes plans to connect rural areas with high-speed internet networks, the development of secure and stable digital infrastructure, delivering government services digitally, and universal digital literacy.
